

INV

Reason finds a secret grief and remorse from every invasion that sin makes upon innocence, and that must render the first entrance and admission of sin uneasy. Soul's Sermons.

The nations of th' Ausonian shore
Shall hear the dreadful rumour, from afar,
Of arm'd invasion, and embrace the war. Dryd. Hen.

William the Conqueror invaded England about the year 1066, which means this; that taking the duration from our Saviour's time 'till now, for one intire length of time, it shews at what distance this invasion was from the two extremes. Locke.

2. Attack of an epidemical disease.
What demonstrates the plague to be endemial to Egypt, is its invasion and going off at certain seasons. Arbutnot.

INVASIVE. adj. [from invade.] Entering hostilely upon other mens possessions; not defensive.
I must come closer to my purpose, and not make more invasive wars abroad, when, like Hannibal, I am called back to the defence of my country. Dryden.

Let other monarchs, with invasive bands,
Lessen their people, and extend their lands;
By gaping nations hated and obey'd,
Lords of the desarts that their fwords had made. Arbutnot.

INVECTIVE. n. f. [from invective, Fr. invective, low Lat.] A censure in speech or writing; a reproachful accusation.
Plain men desiring to serve God as they ought, but being not so skilful as to unwind themselves, where the snares of glossing speech do lie to entangle them, are in mind not a little troubled, when they hear so bitter invectives against that which this church hath taught them to reverence as holy, to approve as lawful, and to observe as behoveful for the exercise of Christian duty. Hooker.

So desprate thieves, all hopeles of their lives,
Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers. Shakep. H. VI.

Cast off the respect fit to be continued between kings, even when their blood is hotted, he fell to bitter invectives against the French king. Bacon's H. VII.

Whilst we condemn others, we may indeed be in the wrong; and then all the invectives we make at their supposed errors, fall back with a rebounded force upon our own real ones. Decay of Piety.

If we take satyr, in the general signification of the word, for an invective, 'tis certain that 'tis almost as old as verse. Dryd. Juv. Dedication.

INVECTIVE. adj. [from the noun.] Satirical; abusive.
Let him rail on; let his invective muse
Have four and twenty letters to abuse. Dryden.

INVECTIVELY. adv. Satirically; abusively.
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
